Herbarium / Moon Jars

Herbarium / Moon Jars is an ongoing project combining watercolor herbarium studies and a series of ceramic vessels. Through observing and preserving plants, I explore themes of memory, time, and the quiet processes of nature.

Recent Notes

Recent Notes is an ongoing series of vases and pots that I began in 2022 and continue to develop in my studio. I use pottery as I would write and draw in a personal diary, covering the surfaces with notes, drawings, quotations, and observations from everyday life.

The work is about the fragility of life that quietly exists beneath our daily routines. Moments that seem ordinary can suddenly become precious or disappear altogether. Current events, conversations with friends and family, memories, news, and personal reflections all become part of these vessels.

I let the forms develop naturally, allowing them to remain irregular and imperfect. By putting aside technical precision, I try to make room for uncertainty and vulnerability. The pots become records of thoughts and feelings rather than finished statements.
